SUBMISSION GUIDELINES

THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTURE STUDENTS an independent, student-run, non-profit organization

AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTURE STUDENTS HONOR AWARDS

Since 1956, the American Institute of Architecture Students (AIAS) has functioned as an intercollegiate network and representational voice for architecture students. The AIAS is an independent, non-profit organization dedicated to linking its student constituents to the diverse academic, social, and creative opportunities that are critical in their development as design professionals.

The mission of the AIAS is to advance leadership, design, and service among architecture students.

INTRODUCTION

At the heart of the organization's activities is a cooperative effort designed to transform today's student into the type of leader the world needs today. This includes both an active and involved student membership, and a close and mutually supportive role for faculty, professionals, the design community and the community who stand to benefit from the advancement of the profession of architecture in its many forms.

The American Institute of Architecture Students Honor Awards recognizes exemplars in our large family in the areas of leadership, collaboration, community service and design excellence. This public recognition is the highest honor the organization can bestow on students, educators, professionals, and partners who support and embody the mission of the AIAS. The 2019 American Institute of Architecture Students Honor Awards categories are as follows:
